

Could you set your own test questions?

BadmintonAndy.com

Coach Developer Task & Actions

Based on: "Could you set your own test questions?" – BadmintonAndy.com

1. Purpose of the Activity

To help coaches explore, define, and test their own understanding by creating the questions they believe matter most. This activity encourages deeper thinking, shared viewpoints, and reflective learning — without the pressure of a formal exam.

2. Main Tasks for Coaches

Task 1 — Identify Key Concepts

Coaches list the ideas, principles, and methods they believe are essential learning from the course information they have just worked with.

Task 2 — Create Your Own Test Questions

Coaches write questions that would genuinely check understanding of those key concepts identified in Task 1.

Task 3 — Compare and Discuss Questions

Coaches share their questions with others, explore differences, and discuss why certain ideas matter.

Task 4 — Prioritise What Should Be Assessed

Coaches decide which questions best represent the core learning and why.

Task 5 — Reflect on the Process

Coaches consider what the activity (Tasks 1 – 4) revealed about their own understanding, values, and coaching approach.

3. Considerations for Coaches

A — Think Like a Coach Developer

Shift from “learner” to “assessor”. Consider what should be tested, not just what was taught.

B — Justify Your Choices

Explain why each question matters. What does it reveal about coaching knowledge or practice?

C — Engage in Open Conversation

Discuss your questions with others. Challenge, explore, and refine ideas together.

4. Benefits for Coaches Taking Part

Benefit 1 — Deeper Understanding

Creating questions forces coaches to think about what truly matters, not just what was presented.

Benefit 2 — Increased Confidence

Coaches realise they can define and evaluate their own learning — a powerful step in development.

Benefit 3 — Better Conversations

The activity encourages open discussion, shared viewpoints, and collaborative thinking.

Benefit 4 — Reduced Assessment Anxiety

Coaches engage in assessment without fear or pressure, making learning more enjoyable and meaningful.

Benefit 5 — Stronger Coaching Identity

Coaches begin to see themselves as contributors to the learning process, not just recipients.

Benefit 6 — Improved Clarity of Key Concepts

By choosing what to test, coaches naturally highlight the most important ideas from the course.

‘Could you set your own test questions?”

- BadmitomAndy.com

Purpose of the Activity

- Explore, define, and test your understand
- Think deeply, share ideas, and reflect.

Main Tasks for Coaches

1. Identify Key Concepts
2. Create Your Own Test Questions
3. Compare & Discuss
4. Prioritise What to Assess

Considerations for Coaches

- Think Like a Coach Developer
- Justify Your Choices
- Engage in Open Conversation

Benefits for Coaches Taking Part

- Deeper Understanding
- Increased Confidence
- Better Conversations
- Reduced Assesment Anxiety
- Stronger Coaching Identity
- Clarity of Key Concepts